In her first feature, Alison Murray extends a unique vision in a compelling story of a young woman's experience with a modern cult. Sherry, a hip but impressionable Londoner, is searching for a place where she can be herself. She thinks she has found this in Spark - Street People Armed with Radical Knowledge. She takes off in Spark's camper van as they cross Europe recruiting a membership of the down and out. They arrive at a disused vineyard in Portugal that will be their paradise. Harry, the group's leader, begins harvesting ripe grapes and ready minds through his own methods of hard work and punishment. The stakes are high within this volatile group. Two deaths ensure the submission of most of the recruits but not Sherry, or the apparently craziest street person, Mad Ax, who is in love with her. When Sherry's mother comes looking for her, she is seduced into joining the idealistic group, just as Sherry is discovering its dark side. Disillusionment complete, Sherry stands up for what she knows is right ...
